What Anderson Students Can Do

There were many beautiful floats to be seen in the parade in Anderson on Anderson County Field Day, the first time that such a thing has been undertaken by Anderson schools, but none could surpass the Pendleton float, the prize winner of the occasion. The sight of this historic old building in miniature going up the streets recalled many a memory to Anderson people. In by-gone days the principal dances of this section of the country were held in this same "Farmers' Hall" and the Pendleton float awakened many a memory of days of yore when it first was seen here last Friday. The Pendleton float demonstrated that the Pendleton children possess ability when it comes to creating real work of art. Clifton Martin is seen in the driver's seat and Miss Ruth Boggs is the attractive young lady beside him.

FIGHT COMING IN THE PARTY CONVENTIONS

SUPPORTERS OF ADMINISTRATION AND ANTIS

DESIRE CONTROL

Coming of Conventions Will Precipitate First Fight in Race for U. S. Senate

All indications are that the administration forces and the antis are both making preparations now to put forth every effort in the fight to get control of the party conventions, soon to be called. The lines will be as tightly drawn this year as they were two years ago and both sides will do their best to have a majority of the delegates present.

The county conventions will convene on May 4 and the first election will take place on August 25, the second primary following on September 8. In connection with the preparations for the holding of the conventions, a dispatch from Columbia says:

"Realizing that control of the clubs carries with it control of the county conventions and through them domination of the State convention the State executive committee along with the election machinery both being Smith and Bleas forces are on the qui vive for the club meetings. With both sides it is expected that attendance at every club meeting throughout the state will break all records this year.

"The 1912 state convention was overwhelmingly against Governor Bleas, his friends controlling only about six out of the 44 county conventions. This year the Bleas faction is straining every nerve to gain control of the state convention and the executive committee. Word was sent out long ago to turn out and set control of the club meetings. The Smith people are quietly determined to retain control of the election machinery and capture the state convention. The result is impossible to forecast with any degree of accuracy.

"Former Governor John Gary Evans of Spartanburg is the present state chairman of the Democratic executive committee and Mr. Christie Roast, of Columbia, is secretary. Each county convention elects a member of the State executive committee and the committee elects the state chairman, and it is believed that he won't make an acceptable chairman to all action in the Democratic party. He has not been seconded on the proposition, but his friends want the party to secure his services.

"While some minor amendments to the rules governing regulations of the primary may be advocated before the convention, it is not believed that any radical restrictions will be adopted. A plan to prevent enrollment of a voter on but one club and providing rolls come ten or fifteen days before the clerk of court in every county before the first primary, will likely be raised on the convention. There is little likelihood of any such restriction being adopted.

"One big fight before the convention will possibly be the move to abolish the county-to-county canvass of candidates. The suggestion to abolish this plan is being warmly seconded throughout the state and there are indications that the move may be successful. There is a growing idea that this canvass tour is working more harm than good and that it would be better for everybody to have it discontinued. If the plan to abolish the county to county plan is pushed, it will stand good chance of being successful. The ideas to let each candidate run his own campaign and speak whenever an audience he pleases and not to speak at all if he doesn't want to, is growing throughout the state.

BAPTISTAL SERVICES
Revival (concluded with immersion of converts).

The revival at the Christian church closed last night with a large and appreciative audience present. The evangelist spoke on "The Church and Her Teacher." Mrs. Ware sang a favorite solo, "When We Get to the End of the Way," and at the close of the services there was baptism. Evangelist Ware and family left this morning for their home at Greenville, S. C., and they were deeply gratified at the deep interest manifested in the meeting by the community in general and for the courtesies accorded the meeting by the daily papers.

Mr. Moore has secured special railroad rates from all points to Greenville for this occasion, the rate granted being a round trip ticket for three cents per mile, with 25 cents additional.

THE LOST DIAMOND

Quite A Feature.

The special feature shown at the Palmetto theater yesterday, was one of the best yet shown in Anderson. The large attendance, during the afternoon and night surely were well pleased with the picture. This popular theater is drawing large crowds to each performance, and assuredly deserves the patronage it receives. As the pictures exhibited up to the present time are among the best made.
